One of CPG Consultants' projects, Gardens by the Bay, has been reported in The New Paper on 4 July 2011.

18 Supertrees will be one of the main attractions in the Gardens by the Bay. Standing at 25m to 50m (nine to 16 storeys) tall, Supertrees are design to evoke the elegance of dominant trees in nature and will provide shade and shelter for visitors. These structures will come alive at night with lights and projected visuals.

The Supertrees will also serve practical functions such as harvesting solar energy with solar cells fitted at the top of the canopies to harvest solar energy. Others will as air exhaust system to purge hot air from the cooled conservatories nearby.

Food and beverage outlet will also be available at the Supertree Grove, with a bistro on top of the tallest Supertree. Visitors can view the Supertrees up close when Bay South, one of the three gardens that make up Gardens by the Bay, officially opens in June 2012.
